

Sarah Silverman

Piano

Degrees and Studies:

Sarah Silverman holds a Bachelor of Music from the Glenn Gould School where she studied with James Anagnoson and a Master of Music from the Manhattan School of Music where she studied with pianist Daniel Epstein, and vocalists Luciana Souza and Peter Eldridge.

Biographical Information:

Born into a musical family, Canadian pianist/singer Ms. Silverman began her studies at an early age with her parents. Her father toured as the drummer with jazz legend Dizzy Gillespie and her mother performed as a classical violinist in Toronto for over a decade.

As a performer, Ms. Silverman is praised for the depth of her musicality, communicative performances and incomparable stage presence. She has been described as "an artist to be reckoned with" [James Anagnoson, Dean of the Glenn Gould School of Music] and as "a first-class chamber musician" [Daniel Avshalomov, Violist of The American String Quartet'].

In addition to performing, Ms. Silverman is a dedicated educator. She is a Teaching Artist for the Lincoln Center Institute, and is on faculty at the Diller-Quaile School of Music, the Third Street Music School Settlement, and the Manhattan School of Music Summer Program.
